

Phylum Porifera: Sponges

- Sponges have a simple porous body
- Simplest of all animals, have no nerves or muscles, they don't really have tissues because the cells are relatively unspecialized
- Suspension feeders – feed by collecting bacteria from water that streams through their bodies then engulfing it by phagocytosis.
- Not symmetrical